
concordia university pagan society

CUPS is Concordia University Pagan Society, a group of about one hundred students, alumni and non-students who follow one of the many Pagan paths. Like the university that is our home - one of Montreal's two English-language institutions and a thriving multicultural community of some 25 000 students and 3 400 staff - we are composed of members from various linguistic and cultural backgrounds, working and studying in many fields. We meet and provide services at Concordia's two campuses in the centre of town and in Montreal's west end.

CUPS activities are many and diverse. At the eight Sabbats, we provide open worship circles to mark the peaks and transitions of the solar cycle which gives us the four seasons. Once during the lunar month, either at new or full moon, we meet for esbat rituals, also open to the public. We publish a free monthly information sheet, Tidings, distributed at our office, general meetings, and other locations in town. Besides working on our own publications, we assist students in conducting academic research on Pagan paths such as Wicca, Druidism and Shamanism. As part of our efforts in the area of public education, we are assembling a lending library of print and audio-visual materials relating to Paganism; we are called upon to give interviews to both the student and professional media, too.

Is CUPS for you? If you are Pagan or you are curious about Paganism, CUPS is here for you. If you love the earth and see the divine as having many expressions in nature and humanity, at CUPS you will find likeminded folk. If you are returning to simpler ways, seeking ritual or the practice of magick, CUPS is a place for you to learn more, and to partake in open discussions in which everyone's opinions are heard and valued. If you are searching for non-hierarchical religion, for spirituality that embraces diversity in all things and values both the masculine and the feminine, at CUPS you can share in the shaping of the community and in the creation of life-affirming ritual. CUPS is for everyone! So come and see us.....
